The extraterrestrial paradigm since Blavatsky's days has changed but not as much as you may think. Certainly we are being visited by the celestial beings and people of other worlds (aliens) more than in the late 1800's, yet books like Isis Unveiled and The Secret Doctrine do not fail to mention the existence of the so-called aliens. If anyone knew ahead of time about the reptilians and their ill-disposed plans, it would have been HPB and the author believes that she did know of them. We take for granted the advances made in flight and the space program since her time, that it is impractical to imagine a world without such technology.

Terms such as “The Builders” and “Celestial Spirits” and “Igili” are present in Blavatsky's writings and indicate what we call aliens today. It is clear however, that their skies were not littered with extraterrestrial craft as they are now. It is quite magical to comprehend the true existence of our neighbors scattered across the Milky Way, including the well-known Sirians and those of Procyon who more-than-likely helped establish our planet and the pyramids. Isn't it a wonder to behold the living fact that we are not alone? In considering the Theosophical doctrine of the planets, it makes more sense that so-called “inter-dimensional” portals exist and that an Inner Earth does indeed exist (the North Polar entrance having been edited out of Google Earth no less).

We have come to know some outsider information on the various extraterrestrial races and the like. It is not always clear whether the beings are from outside this sphere or are physical in respect to us and the mechanics of it. Theosophy can help and aid one in establishing a universal view of the ancient realms beneath and above, with knowledge of the spheres of the globes and the septenary cosmic soul of humankind. It seems obvious that if HPB and the Theosophists were in a world filled with UFO's that they would have made it a topic of their discussion, considering that they were (and still are) masters of the ancient worldview that have existed in our modern age. Some believe that the aliens have visited in regards to the atomic technology and its related sciences emerging on our planet. Quite possibly this is the case—but who will know the thoughts of such far-removed unearthly forms of life?

It has come to be known by the author that, on occasion, it is possible to see an extraterrestrial walking among us. This phenomenon will be left up to the reader to discover for the time being. There is no doubt that Blavatsky's works mention "The Builders" and also maybe "The Watchers" plus other cosmic races of highly intelligent gods existing in our cosmos who have visited us. But she did not mention directly the greys or reptilians or other strange phenomena of our day, although in passing she mentions little green men or martians, etc. In perspective, it seems important that we should look at the phenomena of extraterrestrial visitations or even interactions as explainable only through magic, the ancient wisdom.

Why is every underwater city found considered to be Atlantis? Has anyone noticed how every time there is a new underwater ruin discovered that handfulls of people claim that Atlantis has finally been unearthed? You look online and see a website with pictures of the discovery and alongside it is found the explanation of how Atlantis is finally solved. If you are a rational person, yet still have belief and knowledge of the existence of spirit, then philosophically you would be frustrated with the Atlantis obsession. Consequentially we will never get to the bottom of the mystery of Atlantis if people continue to over-mystify it and only approach it from blind-faith or washed-up mysticism. Unfortunately sometimes spiritually deep subjects are not given enough space for the Light of Reason to shine through, and thus it is the lack of patience that clouds the mind.

Sometimes it seems like Theosophical writings only offer deep, drawn-out philosophical explanations for everything, when clearly people have been desiring some exact responses on various highly intriguing mystical subjects such as the alien/ufu phenomena, Atlantis, Bigfoot, outer space, Machu Picchu, etc., thereby this weekly zine will be an opportunity for a more detailed overview of any and all subjects under the sun. This means that the articles found here will not gloss over the exactitude necessary to convince anyone that magic is a true thing and the study of ancient wisdom is not only for involving oneself with great idealizations but also for sifting through the lost passageways of actual clairvoyance necessary to advance the human race on earth and beyond. According to the author's dowsing work, Atlantis' location is about 1000-1500 miles off the coast of Africa near Nouadhibou, the northern coastal border of Mauritania. Certainly enough, after his dowsing work on this subject, evidence cropped up on the internet of some sort of ruins near that Atlantic location (but as of this writing, no further investigative work has yet been done). Other ancient underwater cities that have been considered by some to be the ruins of Atlantis include the Yonaguni monument of Japan and the Bimini Rock formation of the Bahamas. The Yonaguni rock formation is not as old as Bimini, and it was part of an empire/civilization that upheld the war hungry practices of the Samurai. It kept slaves and invaded a great deal of territory. An amazing history is there, no doubt, but it was entirely human as we are today, Ancient Japanese, and evolving in the timeline of our known ancient past. It is not that old when compared to Bimini. The Lemurians lived at the site of Bimini Wall. Whether or not Blavatsky is entirely correct in regards to the Lemurian locations, the author has yet to correlate, but regardless, Bimini is a site of great importance to humankind. They were not humans as we know humans today, but much taller and they wore tall hats. They had a beautiful outlook on the world and were entirely friendly and had a great civilization. It fell somehow due to an internal conflict or because they did not have enough intellect to protect against the downfall and were caught unaware. Regardless, much more psychic energy can be observed from the Bimini ruins because of their great antiquity and the wonderful observation of those people who were part of a different root race before our present humanity. Much more will be observed on this as the whole picture is formulating as to the history of the earth and the wonders present in it that can only be known from Akashic picture viewing also known as Astral Light Reading.

Who is the greatest living, contemporary occultist in the world today? This question probed the mind of the author, considering the fact that not many self-proclaimed occultists are on the world scene now-a-days. The Tarot responded with none other than Alejandro Jodorowsky! Fabulous discovery it was indeed. And now a little about him for those who did not expect such a magical result to such an obligatory question.

The Holy Mountain, arguably the greatest movie ever made, contains the knowledge of occult magic, theosophy, kabala, alchemy and the grand trumps of the Tarot. It is an epic film, directed by Jodorowsky, with plenty of symbolism, psychology, hints at hidden meanings and references, shamansim, conceptual art and absolute visionary weirdness that no one else but a self-proclaimed "spiritual guru" could have conceptualized and brought to film. Back in the 70's, when this film was made, it was dangerous and cutting edge, and consequently did not experience a true release until sometime around 2009. Up until then the author only had an underground version with subtitles and censoring. This is a life-changing film if you let it be and it has so much initiatory and magical concepts within it that there is no doubt that Jodorowsky, although mostly an artist, would also be considered the greatest occultist we have living among us today.

There was a tremendous UFO sighted at the Mongolian Airport in China in 2010. It looked out of this world and the photos are available on the internet. This great big ship was shining lights out of it, with some sort of flight cabin visible. This photo fascinated the author and he did some skrying on the subject to find some interesting information.

This one seems less common than others, and the photograph illustrates this fact by its very shape and general atmosphere or aura around it. It's definitely something deep. These ET's might not be human in appearance. It seems they are "space tourists" and are just passing through and wanted to have a look around. There's a chance they find Earth to be fancy and will stay for awhile. This is a Queenship or mothership and they have "baby on board." They might have to wear costumes to stay here, if they do. This is a big ship and don't forget that. The dowsing results located their origin at a star near Cepheus, circled below.

Some people have wondered if the Rohonc Codex is somehow as mysterious, or in some way, related to the undecipherable Voynich Manuscript and if it has any occult significance. The author decided to take a few moments of time to consider this codex. First of all, it is not an occult work (as the Voynich clearly is) and it was used for informing the royalty of an impending political battle or even war. They sent the message in this manner and it involved a limited time-frame with the intent to warn them to get away and with such details that the message demanded. It is a witty invention. The people who created it fulfilled their duty and to this day scholars do not know how to interpret it. This codex helped to save someone. Only a few people knew how to decode it. Some of the topics found within it are armament, deception, brilliance, legal matters, imprisonment, quandary and possibly the Pope, a potential attack and it was made for protection. It is however, an important historical document and may make for further in-depth clairvoyant analysis.
